How Fashionable Ladies are got up. -Anna Cora Mowatt, in a late London letter.

There was a time when ladies confined their passion for enamel chiefly to jewelry, but infar nated fair ones of our day are zealously laboring to make gems of their own countenances; the enameler presides at hundreds of toilertes; and would be beauties lavish their gold upon Mme. Rachel and her followers, in exchange for alabaster skins and blooming cheeks, bright eyes and furrowless faces. Happy the man who wooes a bride with a complexion that does not "come and go"—that is, "come in the morning and go away at night;" as the wits in the School for Scandal phrase it-a complexion which"her mind cannot fetch and carry." Happy the lover whose kiss of betrothal pressed upon a lip that has a hue of the strawberry, does not taste of the druggist's compound .-The time will come when the alarmed masculine, looking with suspicion upon the counte nances that outbloom the rose, and dim the lustre of the pearl-upon the eyes too phe nomenally bright, lips too rubious, hair too. abundant and sunshiny-will find more attraction in a few natural imperfections, and judge the genuineness of charms within by the absence of those which can be secured by art on

It chances that we have just received, from a reliable source a full description of Mme. Rachel's skilful manipulations, and you may be amused by this initiation into the mysteries of that surface now so common among European ladies. First among the beautiful appliances, when awful beauty puts on all her charms, comes the Vestris enamel-an elastic pigment which fills un all indenta ions of the skin, peck-mark, fur rows, scars. It is the same color as the flesh, and yields to the movement of the muscles .-After being carefully filled, wherever requisite, the whole face is washed with blanc de perles. A delicate powder, called "bloom of roses," is then applied in small quantities to the cheeks. (Not the rouge or carmine used by astresses to neutralize the ghastly blue glare cast up by the footlights.) The "eye color" consists of three preparations-the first to darken the egebrows, perfect their shape, and add to the upper and lower lashes: the second to remove the crow's feet; and the third, which is a peculiar blueish powder, lightly laid on, just under the eye, to increase its apparent size and add brilliancy. Another preparation is to stain the lips and gums a "natural looking" red,—unnatural looking, from its extreme brightness, would be the more correct description. A powerful dentrifice whitens the teeth, (and probably hastens their decay;) the unsightly hairs growing out of the moles, and unfeminine down shading the upper lip, are destroyed by depillatories; freckles and skin stains are removed by a paste, which is said to decompose them and form a new scurf skin; tresses of any shade receive the much admired hay color, or a golden hue, from Albanian water, or any darker tint, by the use of some other hair wash; and the nails are rendered delicate and induced to grow in the form required, by nail shields worn during the night.

Will it be believed that in London one sees hundreds of women-not the unfortunates of the demi-monde, but ladies, well-bred, welldressed, highly educated ladies, of irreproachable reputation, and moving in good society, who daily assume their enamel mask with their deal through the South. To observe, study and judge of the acts, temper and disposition of the acts acts and the acts are acts are acts are acts and the acts are acts are acts and the acts are acts are acts and the acts are acts are acts are acts are acts and the acts are acts are acts are acts are acts and the acts are acts and the acts are act of the people was my main object. Everywhere I went, in every town and village, in every railroad car and steamboat, I met numbers of Northern men of every imaginable pursuit-some 'prospecting,' some who had 'lo-cated,' some travelling for amusement, some looking up old balances, some seeking good investments, and many who had no capital tut their brains and skill, seeking employment. Of all this number, I do not remember one who complained of having received the least indignity, much less personal danger, although many filed very much in that courtesy and kindness which prudence as well as good taste dictated. "I have invariably found that where they did not, by their manner, interfere in what did not concern them, or by the expression of offensive political opinions, provoke the contrary, the Northern men here have been court ously treated, and their business enterprise encouraged I do not mean to say that other things bing equal, the Southern storekeeper would not have the preference, which would be very desire to 'drive Northern men out of the country, or to injure or oppress them in any way. They are as sate in any part of Georgia as they Would be in Lowell; and if they bring money and start useful and beneficial enterprises, they are welcomed and encouraged. I speak, of erly adjusted. For sale by course, of the mass of the people. There may be a foolish, hot-headed young man here and there who 'feels good' when he des a Yankee, and uses intemperate language; but the pecple are sensible, courteous and well behaved and, while they do not affect any gushing aflection for Northern people, and do not make any marked manifestations of regard, they behave with propriety, and are certainly void of offences.' They invite capital and skilled labor as their interests and necessities demand; to do otherwise would be lunacy."
